Item 5. Environmental education for sustainable development

Further to suggestions made at the third meeting of the Working Group of Senior Officials, a drafting group was established to develop a strategy for environment and education, under the leadership of Sweden and the Russian Federation. It met for the first time on 9 September. The results of this meeting and further consultation were presented to the Committee on Environmental Policy, at its ninth session, and the Working Group of Senior Officials, at its fourth meeting.

Delegations stressed that a strategic view on environment for sustainable development required coordination between Environment Ministers and Education Ministers and other bodies concerned. It was therefore decided to explore with the Council of Europe, which was currently organizing a discussion by Education Ministries on this issue, the feasibility of developing a joint process for education on sustainable development.

The Working Group requested the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe to take up this question at its session in March as part of the debate on sustainable development.

With respect to the future work of the above-mentioned drafting group on environmental education for sustainable development and its upcoming meeting scheduled for 22 November 2002 in Moscow, the Working Group directed it to provide to the Executive Committee at its meeting in January a short document on environmental education for sustainable development, examining the key issues and suggesting possible future actions, that could be the basis for decisions by the Ministers in Kiev.

The Working Group may, at its meeting in February, review the possibility of organizing a seminar on best practices in environmental education for sustainable development as a side event in Kiev.
