- ✓ GDPR prescribes rules on personal data processing
- ✓ Personal data protection requirements is not an obstacle for lawful processing
- ✓ GDPR and other legislative regulation is not opposite, it supplements each other
- ✓ It is important to understand and find correct interaction and balance between several rights/legislative acts

In order to get the balance between rights, there are special derogation for the statistical purposes:

✓ Derogation from the storage limitation principle

Personal data may be stored for longer periods insofar as the personal data will be processed solely for statistical purposes in accordance with Article 89(1) subject to implementation of the appropriate technical and organisational measures required by this Regulation in order to safeguard the rights and freedoms of the data subject

✓ Derogation from purpose limitation principle

Collected for specified, explicit and legitimate purposes and not further processed in a manner that is incompatible with those purposes; further processing for statistical purposes shall, in accordance with Article 89(1), not be considered to be incompatible with the initial purpose

✓ Derogation from data subjects rights

Where personal data are processed for statistical purposes, Union or Member State law may provide for derogations from the rights referred to in Articles 15, 16, 18 and 21 subject to the conditions and safeguards referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article in so far as such rights are likely to render impossible or seriously impair the achievement of the specific purposes, and such derogations are necessary for the fulfilment of those purposes
