23. In 2000, Heads of State and Governments of the European Union (EU) met in Lisbon and launched a series of ambitious reforms at national and European level, known since then as the Lisbon Strategy. The Lisbon Strategy focused on building a competitive, dynamic and cohesive knowledge-based economy and set the overall goal of moving to full employment through creating not only more jobs but also better jobs. Hence improving quality in work appears as a key priority in the European Employment Strategy together with full employment and social cohesion and a guiding principle in the modernisation of Europe's social model as initiated in the Social Policy Agenda. Both the Social Policy Agenda and the Lisbon Strategy sought to insure the positive and dynamic interaction of economic, employment and social policy, and to forge a political agreement which mobilises all key actors to work jointly towards the new strategic goal.
