ABSTRACT

Title	UNECE Task Team: launch of online resource on measuring gender identity
Author Name	Andrew Nash
Author Organization	Office for National Statistics (ONS)
Session	Regional networking platform
Gender identity is a topic of growing interest internationally, with an increased recognition that not everyone identifies with the male or female classification they have been given at birth. Indeed, not everyone identifies with the male/female binary at all. However, collecting data is both complex and challenging, and will often be affected by country-specific contexts. To assist those aiming to develop statistics in this area, the UNECE Task Team on Gender Identity has developed an online information platform. This presentation provides an introduction to the topic and an overview of the platform.
