Tuesday 2 November 2021, 9:30 – 12:30 (CET)

Virtual meeting

1. Background

Women's economic empowerment and gender equality are fundamental to achieving a prosperous, inclusive and sustainable future for all. This is broadly recognized and is reflected in the 2030 Agenda both as a stand-alone goal for gender equality – SDG 5 – and as accelerator to other SDGs in specific gender-responsive targets. Measures and actions that promote equitable access to and control over resources, production and consumption equally shaped by women and men, and outcomes of activities that equally benefit women and men have proved to have a strong impact on all three dimensions of sustainable development – social, economic and environmental.

Countries in the SPECA region have achieved substantial progress in expanding opportunities for women and girls in the economic realm in the last decades across the public and private sectors underpinned by legal reforms and policies at various levels. The advancement of women, however, remains slow, uneven across industries and occupations, and varies by countries. The progress reported at the UNECE Beijing+25 Regional review meeting on 29 and 30 October 2019 and the ESCAP Ministerial Conference on Beijing+25 Review from 27 to 29 November 2019 as well as the Annual SPECA Working Group on Gender and SDGs meeting in October 2020, remains insufficient to close the gender gaps in employment, decision-making at all levels, payment and entrepreneurship.

The COVID-19 pandemic and its economic and social consequences have added a new layer to existing inequalities and deepened their gender dimension due to the disproportionate impact on women and girls. Women have been hit harder than men as they tend to earn less and dominate in sectors that have suffered the most from closures during lockdowns and restrictions imposed to combat the spread of the COVID-19. The loss of income from employment, remittances, and other sources, including informal economy as well as increased domestic care responsibilities and risks of domestic violence, have worsened the living and health conditions of women both in urban and rural areas in the SPECA countries. The increased burden of unpaid care of women as schools closed during lockdowns has made many women drop out of the labour market, thus reducing their economic security amid growing uncertainties for re-joining gainful employment. Now, without targeted interventions to address the disproportionate impact of COVID-19 on women, there is a risk that progress towards achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women would further reverse. This, in turn, will hold back the attainments of the SDGs.

To support a COVID-19 response and build sustainable recovery towards resilient societies, policies need to mitigate the adverse impact on women and address women's economic empowerment through systemic efforts to reduce economic insecurity and provide opportunities for women to paid and decent work and reduce the unpaid care and domestic work. Special measures are needed to meet the challenges of women engaged in the care sector as well as women entrepreneurs through both immediate actions as well as short- and long-term plans. As countries are still struggling to find the appropriate COVID response in line with their fiscal space, regional and sub-regional support is critical for building back better, and more equal.

The Thematic Working Group on Gender and SDGs under the Special Programme for the Economies of Central Asia, (SPECA) continues to work in the area of gender mainstreaming and transformative policies that target women's non-discriminatory participation in economic activities, both in public and private companies, through promoting labour market policies, preventing stereotypes in education and research to advance the participation of women in R&D sectors and building support systems for women entrepreneurship development.

The annual meeting of the SPECA Working group on Gender and SDGs will focus on policy initiatives and measures undertaken during the COVID-19 pandemic in the SPECA countries and their impact on women and girls with the aim to identify further strategies and actions for mitigating the adverse effects on women and accelerating gender equality in the economic realm. Special focus will be paid to the gender and care dimensions of the economic policy packages both in the short- and long-term plans and their implementation in the SPECA countries.

UNECE and ESCAP will convene the annual meeting of the SPECA Working Group on Gender and SDGs on 2 November 2021 in the margins of the SPECA Governing Council and SPECA Economic Forum taking place from 15 to 17 November 2021 in Tashkent, Uzbekistan.

The 2021 annual meeting of the SPECA Thematic Working Group and SDGs will be virtual and will be hosted by the State Committee for Family, Women and Children's Affairs of Azerbaijan.
