

In the Kyrgyz Republic, relations in the field of environmental protection and rational use of natural resources are regulated by the Law "About environmental protection".

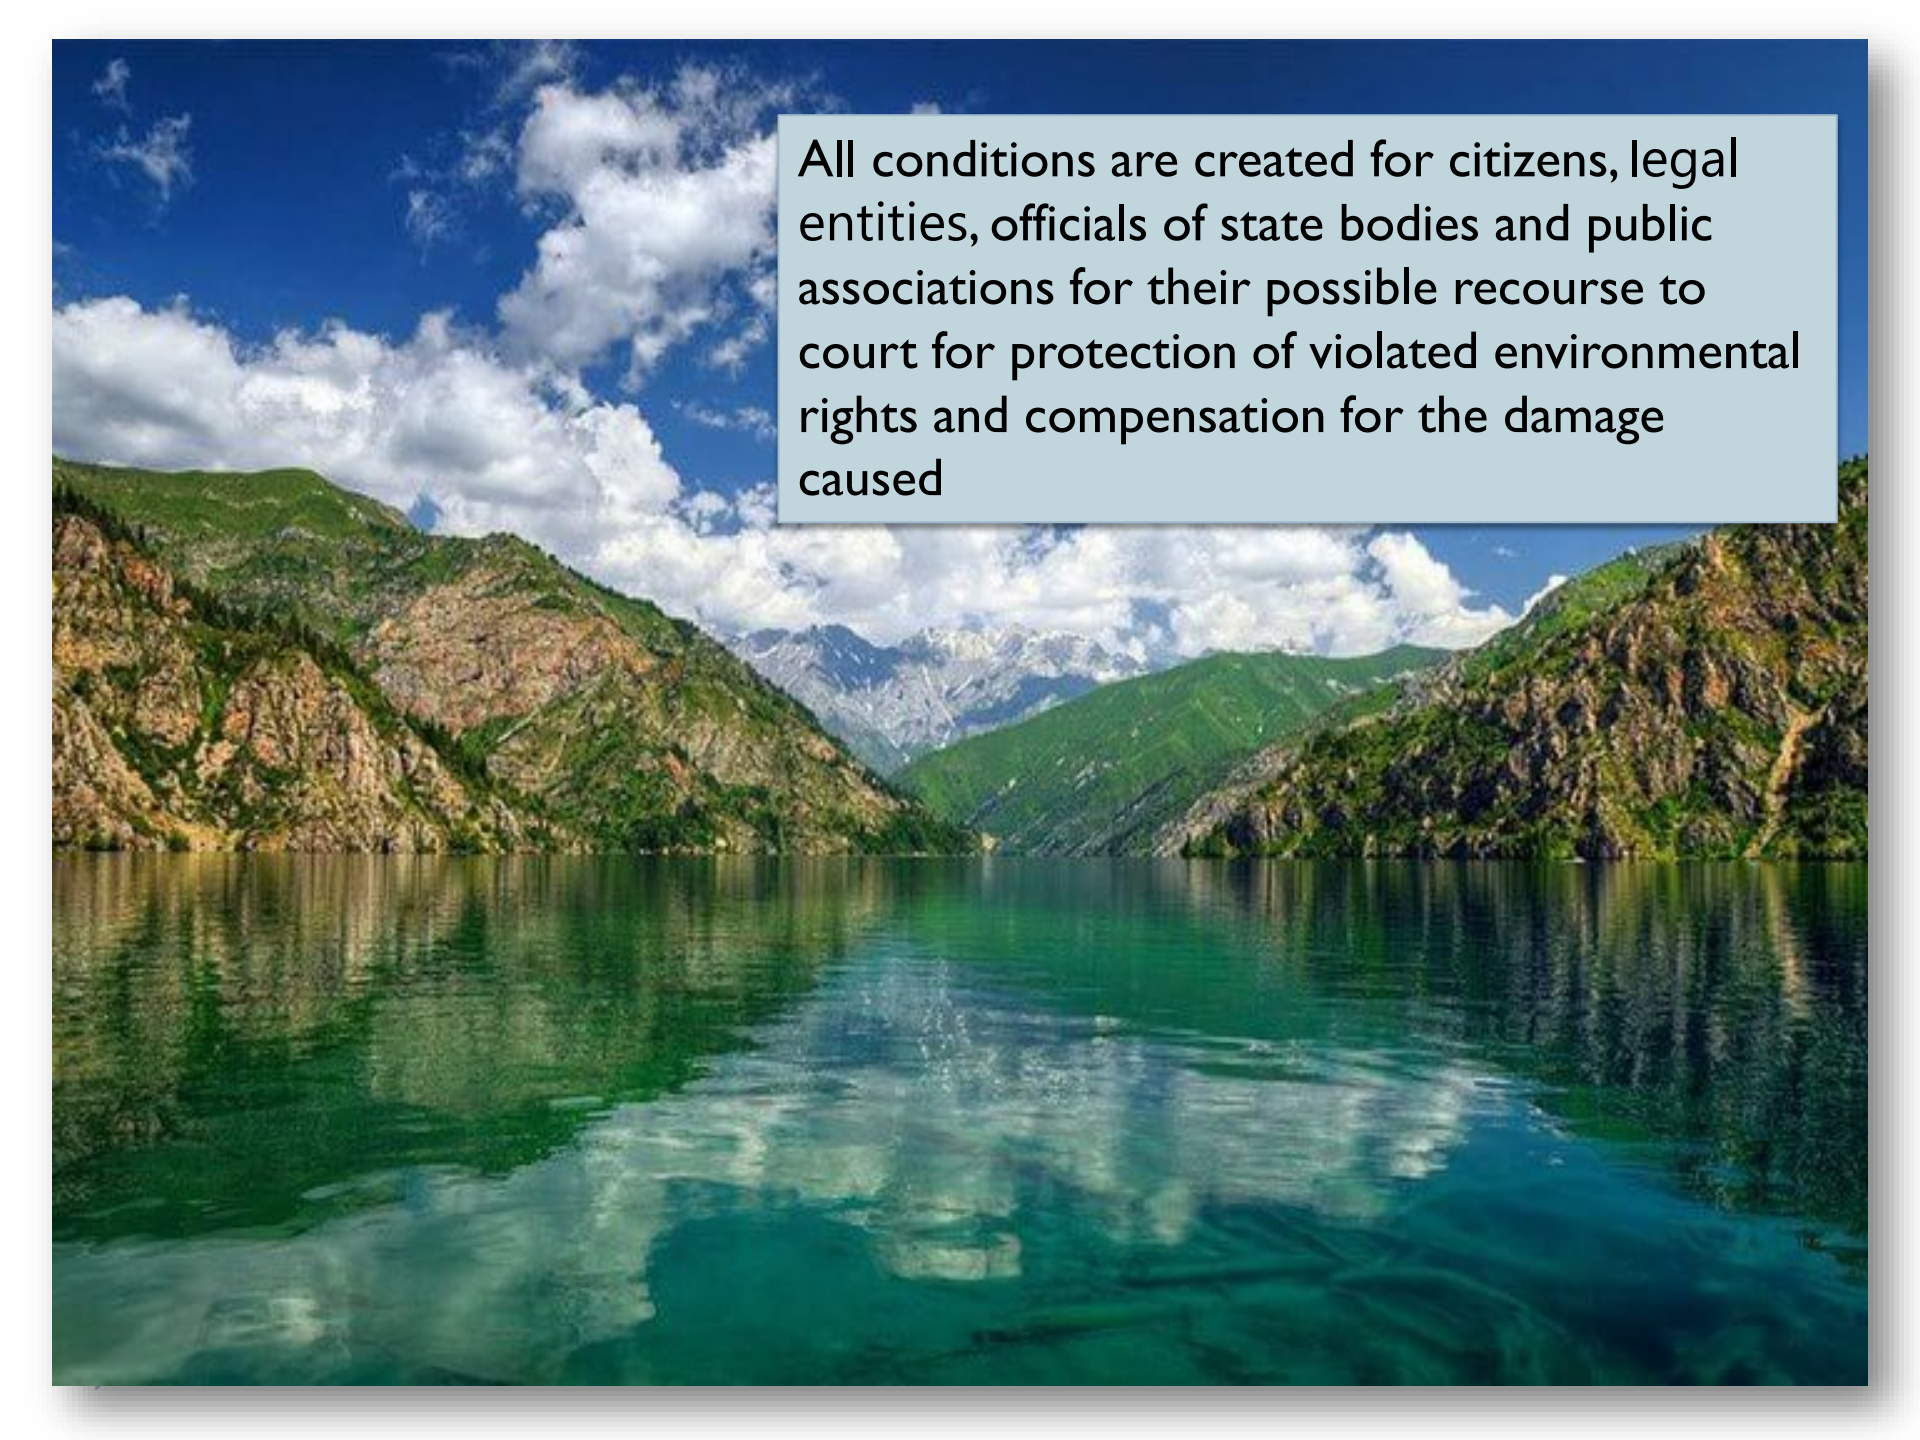

Public associations performing environmental functions are granted the right to obtain information about the environment, to take the initiative to hold referendums and public debates on draft laws on environmental issues, and to sue for compensation for damage to the health and property of citizens caused by violations of environmental legislation.

All conditions are created for citizens, legal entities, officials of state bodies and public associations for their possible recourse to court for protection of violated environmental rights and compensation for the damage caused

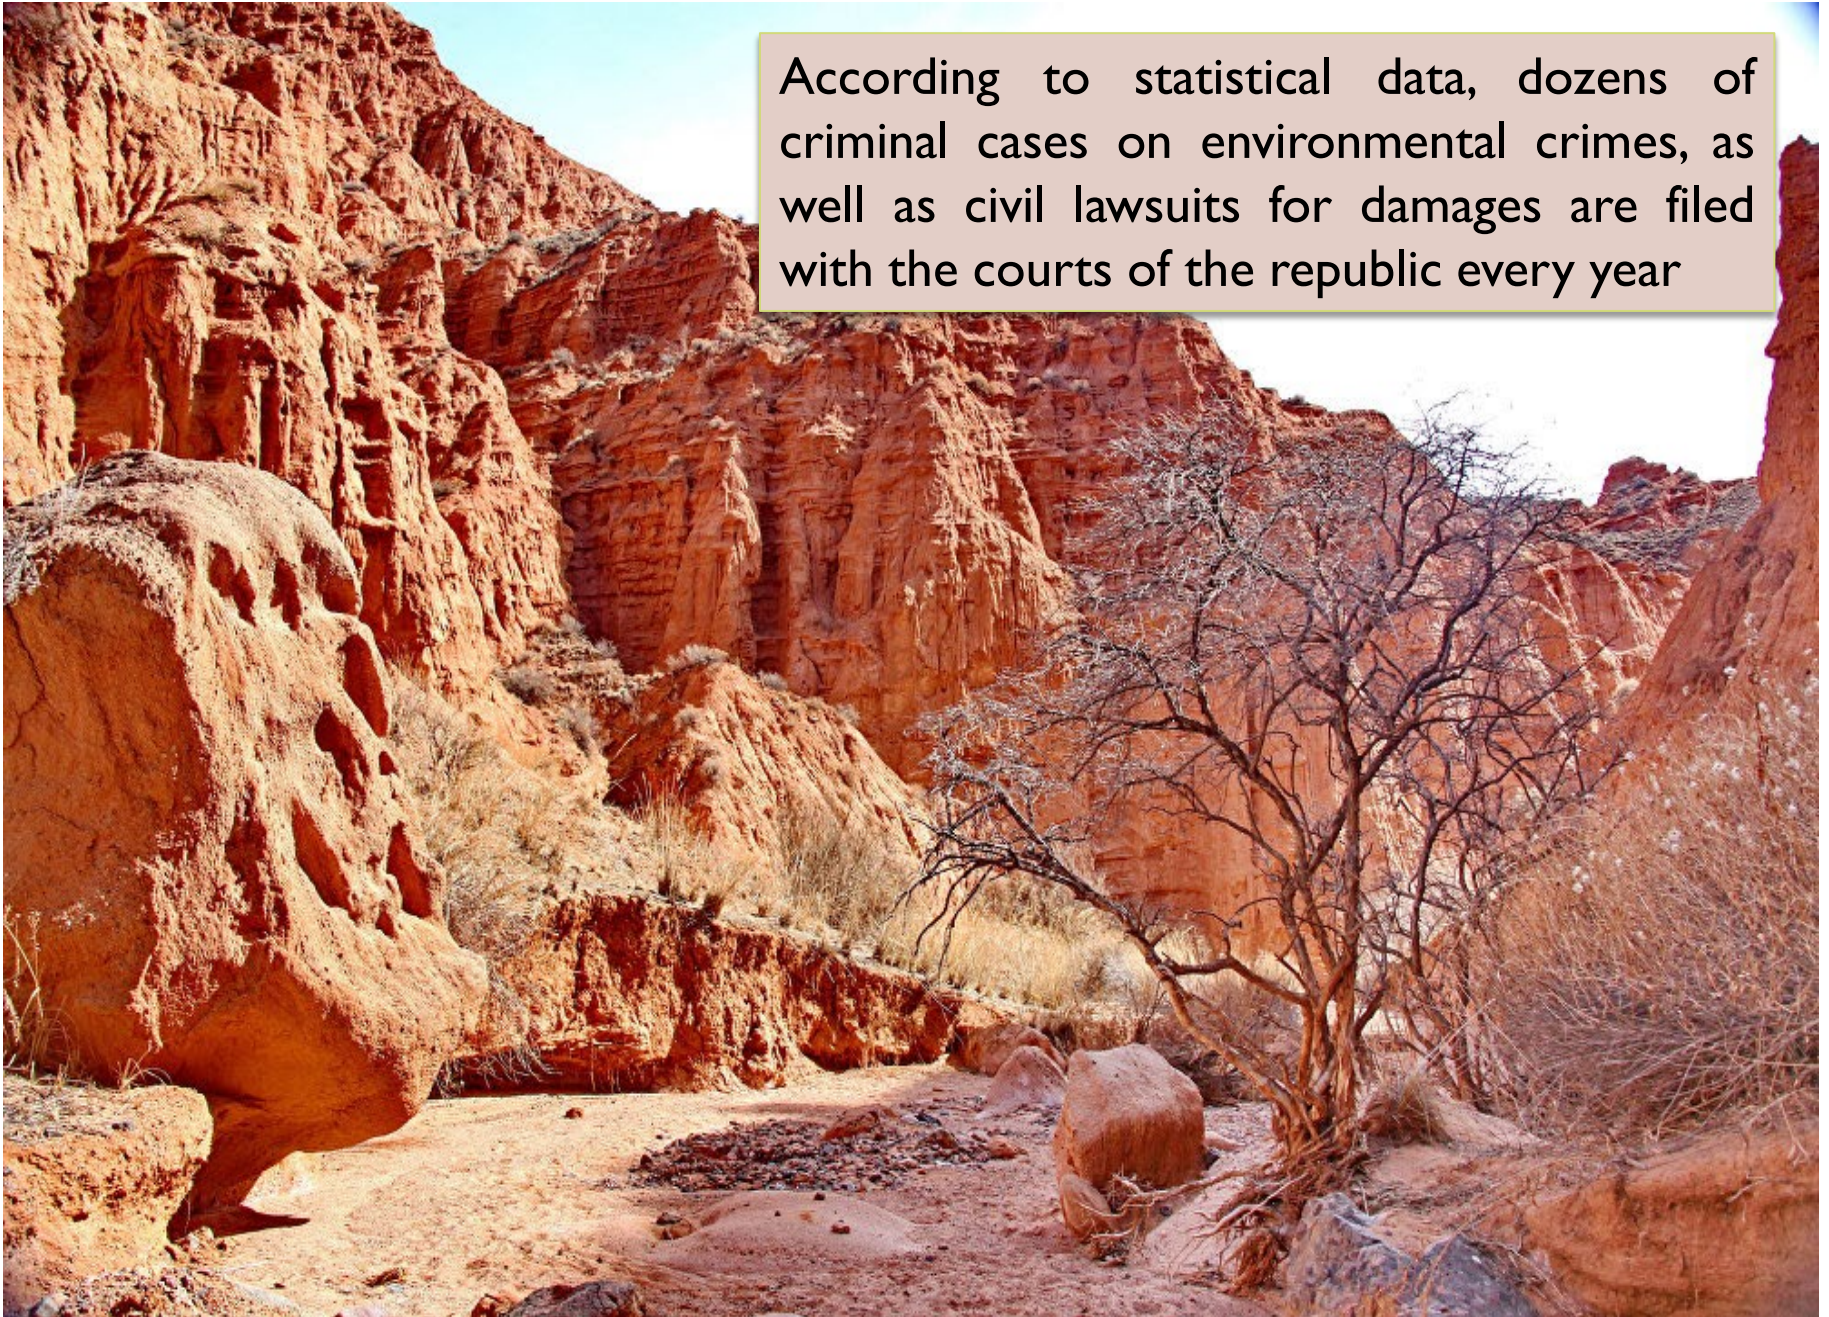

In order to ensure the openness of the judicial system and access to information, all court decisions, including those related to environmental issues, are posted on an electronic portal that is open to all interested parties

According to statistical data, dozens of criminal cases on environmental crimes, as well as civil lawsuits for damages are filed with the courts of the republic every year

On March 19, 2021, the Decree of the President of the Kyrgyz Republic "On Measures to Ensure Environmental Security and Climate Resilience of the Kyrgyz Republic" was adopted

The Kyrgyz Republic has declared
2022 the Year of Mountain
Ecosystems Protection and Climate
Resilience

Roadmap for the Year of Mountain
Ecosystem Protection and Climate
Resilience developed and approved

Kyrgyzstan aims to reduce gas emissions by 44% by 2030, and by 2050 on a platform of green development will try to achieve carbon neutrality

Thank you for your attention!