

Evaluation of project

Improved sustainable urban development in 17 Norwegian cities (March 2023)

Progress report as of 31 December 2023

1	There is momentum to upscale Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs) in the UNECE region and a growing community of practitioners that meet for exchanging experiences and ways of implementing the SDGs at grassroots / local levels. The City Resilience Training online course for the implementation of the VLRs, which currently only exists in English, is considered as one of the major, joint achievements of the project that has potential for a wide user community. The UNECE Housing and Land Management Unit should mobilize additional resources for translating it into more languages, and for ensuring accessibility to it by persons with special needs. The Subprogramme should also explore how to further deepen collaboration and linkages with UNDESA in promoting the VLR movement globally and ways to monitor how the VLRs are updated after pilot phases. This would ensure that the assessments continue to be relevant monitoring	UNECE accepts the recommendation. UNECE is already cooperating with UN DESA (as well as UN-Habitat and United Cities and Local Governments (UCLG)) on a joint UNDA 14th tranche project on VLRs in Eastern Europe and Central Asia, which includes testing of monitoring tools in four cities in the UNECE region. There is an intention to organize translation of the 'City Resilience Training online course for the implementation of the VLRs' into Russian, however it depends on availability of XB resources. 2	The Voluntary Local Review (VLR) project planning should routinely include capacity building on public financial management and budgeting at city level to ensure that VLRs inform local policymaking, operational strategies and budgets. This can be done through continued exposure of different partners to other's experiences and networking, and through supporting partners in identifying innovative sources of financing to leverage public financing with private funding sources. Along with data collection and using data in evidence-based policymaking, these are distinct working areas in which Norway could assume leadership and share knowledge with other countries. It is thus important that the UNECE Housing and Land Management Unit continues to capitalize on the expertise in Norway.	UNECE accepts the recommendation. A proposal for capacity building activities was prepared for funding by the UN Regular Programme for Technical Cooperation but unfortunately it was not funded. 	planned activities serve for long-term strategic purposes, that the project responds to the needs of the intended recipients and that no strategic diversions are needed during the implementation. Defining the theory of change allows monitoring of the project successes and the verification of results during and after the project.
5	While synergy benefits should be sought to avoid duplication of efforts, it is important that project activities and their successes are traceable and verifiable against project plans and budgets. Future UNECE Housing and Land Management Unit plans and reports should link the project activities, the related expenditure, outputs and outcomes more clearly and they should differentiate core project activities, synergy benefits, and complementarities of the related action.	UNECE accepts the recommendation. UNECE Housing and Land Management Unit is strengthening project planning through the deployment and use of a new ERP (Umoja) solution Integrated Planning, Management and Reporting, which will allow better monitoring of project implementation and to take corrective measures in case of diversions from the project plan.	Tea Aulavuo, Chief, Housing Unit, FLHD	31 December 2023	Implemented as of 31 December 2023 UNECE Housing and Land Management Unit strengthened project planning and monitoring through the deployment and use of a new ERP (Umoja) solution 'Integrated Planning, Management and Reporting', which allows better monitoring of project implementation and to take corrective measures in case of diversions from the project plan.
