

BEIJING+30 REGIONAL REVIEW MEETING

"Reviewing 30 Years of Beijing Commitments to Accelerate Gender Equality in the ECE Region"

21-22 October 2024, Palais des Nations, Geneva

CONCEPT NOTE

I. Background

In the year 2025, the international community will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (1995). Ten years will have passed since the adoption of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). In the Beijing Declaration and the 2030 Agenda, UN member States took universal commitments to achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls worldwide.

In line with the ECOSOC resolution E/RES/2022/5 of 8 June 2022, the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW), at its sixty-ninth session in 2025, "will undertake a review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly". The review will also be an opportunity to discuss the contribution of the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for action towards the full realization of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

Gender equality and Women's Empowerment in the ECE Region

Across the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) region, accelerated action is needed to meet the ambitions of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the 2030 Agenda on Sustainable Development, including SDG 5 on gender equality and all other SDGs.

While the UNECE region has seen some gains made towards the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women, overall progress remains uneven and insufficient to meet the majority of 2030 targets. The UNECE region remains on track to achieve just one of the nine targets of Goal 5, Achieve Gender Equality, while data is not yet available for a further five targets. It is an alarming reality that, at present, we do not have enough data to assess progress against basic measures, such as equal economic rights or violence against women and girls in the UNECE region.

The development and implementation of legal frameworks and policies that address discrimination and support gender equality and women's empowerment (GEWE) are progressing at a pace too slow to achieve substantial change. Gender disparities in time spent on domestic tasks remain significant, with women often shouldering a disproportionate share of unpaid domestic work. These disparities, among other issues, also hinder women's abilities to participate fully in economic activities. Simultaneously, inadequate social protection systems exacerbate poverty, particularly for vulnerable groups such as older women and women with disabilities, and undermine their resilience to economic shocks and other crises. Other areas, such as women's empowerment in technology, are advancing well and likely to meet targets; however, digitalization has brought other challenges that have yet to be effectively addressed, such as technology-facilitated violence against women and girls.

Furthermore, geopolitical tensions and armed conflicts in the region significantly impact GEWE by exacerbating existing gender disparities, increasing women's and girls' vulnerabilities, displacement and reducing access to essential services. Women and girls in conflict-affected areas not only face daily threats from shelling and missile attacks but also heightened risks of violence, including conflict-related sexual violence, exploitation, deportation, and abuse. These challenges are compounded by disruptions in education and healthcare services, including through the diversion of resources from social programmes and services to security and defense. Geopolitical tensions and conflicts also contribute to economic instability, which disproportionately affects women, who are often employed in precarious and informal sectors and face higher rates of job loss and reduced income-generating opportunities.¹

The Beijing+30 global review

In 2025, the global community will mark the 30th anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (1995)², the 25th anniversary of UN Security Council Resolution 1325, and the final five years of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the Sustainable Development Goals.

This anniversary will be an opportunity to strengthen gender-responsive action and implementation of the 2030 Agenda and other global commitments. This opportunity of the anniversary presents an occasion to engage with gender equality advocates and to bring those who remain on the sidelines into the center of a whole-of-government, whole-of-society effort. By joining forces, governments together with society have the capacity to overcome and eradicate the root causes of gender inequality and chart a path forward for genuine, substantive equality, with equal rights and equal opportunities for women and girls.

The sixty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women will take place at United Nations Headquarters in New York from 10 to 21 March 2025³. The main focus of the sixty-ninth session will be on the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (BPfA) and the outcomes of the 23rd special session of the General Assembly.

In accordance with ECOSOC Resolution E/RES/2022/5, the United Nations regional commissions have been invited to undertake regional reviews and convene regional intergovernmental meetings. These will feed into the sixty-ninth session of the Commission.

BEIJING +30

In accordance with ECOSOC Resolution E/RES/2022/5, UNECE will lead the regional intergovernmental review of the BPfA for the UNECE region, in close collaboration with the UN Women Regional Office for Europe and Central Asia (ECARO).

The regional review aims to assess current and emerging challenges that affect the implementation of the BPfA, the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women and its contribution towards the full realization of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in the UNECE region, and strengthen the knowledge base on progress and gaps in realizing the rights of women and girls in the region. It aims to build regional consensus on actions needed to accelerate the implementation of commitments made in the BPfA.

The Beijing+30 regional review will consist of three main tracks: analytical, consultative, and intergovernmental.

Analytical review

As part of the Beijing+30 review, member States have been invited to undertake comprehensive national-level reviews that take stock of achievements, identify gaps and setbacks, and outline strategies for addressing those gaps and challenges at the national level. Member States are expected to respond to a survey and submit national reports by 1 June 2024. The national reports will inform the regional reports on the Beijing+30 review.

The analytical track of the regional review process will examine progress, gaps and challenges, and identify good practices towards the achievement of the commitments made in the BPfA in the UNECE region. The analytical review will provide the substantive background to consultations and deliberations at the meeting.

Stakeholder consultations

The engagement of and consultation with stakeholders is a vital part of the regional review process and the intergovernmental meeting. A steering committee will be established to coordinate the consultation with civil society organizations comprising women's organizations, academia, and other key stakeholders in the regional review process. Meanwhile, Governments are encouraged to complement the whole-of-government approach for comprehensive national-level reviews with a whole-of-society approach that involves multi-stakeholder participation and contributions.

UNECE and UN Women will facilitate the participation of key stakeholders in the official agenda of the Beijing+30 Regional Review Meeting. Stakeholders will also be invited to organize side events, including in collaboration with UNECE member States, United Nations entities, and others.

Intergovernmental meeting

UNECE will organize the Beijing+30 Regional Review Meeting, titled "Reviewing 30 Years of Beijing Commitments to Accelerate Gender Equality in the UNECE Region", in collaboration with the UN Women ECARO from 21 to 22 October 2024 at the Palais des Nations in Geneva, Switzerland.

The meeting is expected to reinvigorate political commitment to advance gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls in the UNECE region and build regional consensus on priority actions to accelerate the implementation of commitments made in the BPfA. The meeting will act as a platform for sharing knowledge and information on progress made, gaps and challenges encountered in realizing gender equality, and the rights of women and girls in the region. The outcome will serve as the region's input to the deliberations at the 69th session of the Commission on the Status of Women in 2025.

III. Date, venue and participation

The Beijing+30 Regional Review Meeting will be held from 21 to 22 October 2024 at the Palais des Nations in Geneva, Switzerland.

The meeting will bring together ministers, senior officials, and representatives from relevant ministries, United Nations entities, civil society organizations, youth organizations, academia, independent experts, and other relevant stakeholders from across the UNECE region. Delegations will consist of heads/representatives of the national machinery for the advancement of women, representatives of various ministries, experts, parliamentarians, NGOs, etc.
